

Completing even seemingly small personal improvements is typically far more difficult than we imagine and plan for—therefore we should give ourselves (or God) more credit for every small change made!

